PREFACE

The Child Abuse Prevention Program (CAPP) was established in June of 1976 to provide leadership and support to the Government's efforts in the prevention of child abuse.

CAPP remains an important program initiative of the Ministry of Community and Social Services, relating closely to the Ontario Centre for the Prevention of Child Abuse since the Centre was established in 1983.

CAPP is committed to promoting the following four aims:

1. Develop and promote public education.
2. Provide and promote parent education.
3. Provide and promote professional education about effective child abuse prevention, intervention, programs and resources.
4. Promote cooperation among professionals and organizations.

The activities of CAPP and the Centre reflect a basic commitment to the concept of collaboration - collaboration among agencies, professionals, government officials and lay people. Recognizing that no one individual, group, organization or professional possesses all of the expertise to identify, investigate, treat or prevent child abuse, CAPP promotes a range of activities. These activities include the following: community consultation, multiprofessional seminars, professional training, local initiatives, public education, demonstration projects, research, intergovernmental coordination, agency/professional collaboration and the publication of this Catalogue.

This, the 4th edition of the Catalogue, contains annotations of reports and publications available through CAPP. It is designed primarily for those concerned with services to children and families; the developers of intervention programs, those who educate, supervise and train professionals and those engaged in research and direct service.

II. PARENT EDUCATION

6. Concerned Citizens Committee. Arm Your Child. Prevent Sexual Abuse. Kingston, Ontario: 1985, pp. 8.

This booklet was prepared by a group of people who were victims of sexual abuse or whose children were victims. It is written for parents to help them prevent or deal with sexual abuse. The centre of the booklet has a page to insert phone numbers of helping agencies in the user's area. It also has a directory of relevant services in and around Kingston. CAPP

7. Ministry of Community and Social Services. A Guide for Parents of Young Children: Infants, Toddlers and Preschoolers. Toronto, Ontario: Government Printing Office, 1984, pp. 55.

This pamphlet contains information and suggestions to help parents cope with the demands of child rearing. For French Translation see 91. CAPP

8. Ministry of Community and Social Services. Single Parents: A Resource Guide. Toronto, Ontario: Government Printing Office, 1984, pp. 20. CAPP

This booklet contains suggestions from both professionals and single parents on the unique problems facing single parent families. For French Translation see 92. CAPP

9. Ministry of Community and Social Services. The Teenage Years: A Time of Change and Challenge. Toronto, Ontario: 1986.

This pamphlet, for parents of teenagers, emphasizes the building of a positive relationship between teens and parents. Examples of parent-teen conflicts are given and possible ways of resolving these are provided. The role of parents as listeners, communicators, teachers, negotiators and models are considered. Information is provided about values, independence, dating, the need for privacy, sex education, self-esteem, and peer pressure. (Available Fall, 1986.) CAPP

10. Ministry of the Solicitor General. Crimeproofing. Toronto, Ontario: 1985.

This brochure for parents in Ontario provides information and directions to parents to help prevent sexual abuse of their children. It also outlines what to do should they suspect their child has been sexually abused. For French Translation see 94.

III. PROFESSIONAL EDUCATION

A. GENERAL

11. Ministry of Community and Social Services, Policy Services and Program Evaluation Branch. Review of the Implementation of the Standards and Guidelines for the Management of Child Abuse Cases. Ministry of Community and Social Services, Ontario: 1985, pp. 90.

This document reviews the implementation of 84 standards and guidelines provided for CAS workers entrusted with the legislated responsibility of child welfare. The review identifies the need for improved provision of resources to properly implement the guidelines, some changes in current requirements, and the continuing need for inter-professional cooperation. This review will be used as the basis to revise current standards and guidelines.

CAPP

12. Ministry of Community and Social Services, Highlights of the Child and Family Services Act. Government of Ontario, 1984, pp. 38.

This booklet highlights several sections of the Act. It emphasizes selected provisions including the reporting of child abuse, child abuse review teams, and the child abuse register. For French Translation see 93.

13. Niagara Children's Services Committee. Preventing Child Abuse - A Review of Recent Programs. Niagara, Ontario: 1985, pp. 104.

This paper provides an overview of 28 Canadian and American child abuse prevention programs which have been evaluated and considered successful. In addition to the program descriptions, the author addresses the problem of defining prevention and issues in evaluation.

CAPP

14. Ontario Centre for the Prevention of Child Abuse and the Ministry of Community and Social Services. The Ontario Collection. Toronto, Ontario: 1985, pp. 354.

Subsidies were provided by the Child Abuse Prevention Program to 25 authors from Ontario whose papers were presented at the Fifth International Congress on Child Abuse and Neglect in Montreal in 1984. The papers which deal with current issues and initiatives in child abuse are bound in this one volume.

CAPP

15. Reitz, J.G. Child Abuse Registers: A Review of the Literature. Ministry of Community and Social Services. Toronto, Ontario: 1983, pp. 71.

This is a report of a literature review pertaining to child abuse registers. The report compares experiences with registers in Ontario, Britain and the United States and indicates the major considerations to be taken into account in planning and decision-making.

B. SPECIFIC TOPICS

(1) Parenting

16. McMaster University. Predicting Parenting Skills in Primary Care - Child Development Study. McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario: 1985, pp. 143.

The role of the family physician in early detection of signs of abuse in prospective parents is considered in this study. It concludes that through the assessment of specific social variables before birth, the family physician may help prevent child abuse through informal intervention. CAPP

17. Murray, M., Ornstein, M. and Rhyne, D. Parenting in Ontario: Review of Research and Design Recommendations. Toronto, Ontario: Institute for Behavioural Research, York University, 1983, pp. 36.

This review is intended to serve as the basis for a study of parenting activities and problems encountered by parents in Ontario. The review focuses on research of child rearing, of the factors affecting child abuse and of parental perceptions. CAPP

18. Ratcliffe, W.D. and Wittman, W.P. Parenting Education: Test-Market Evaluation of a Media Campaign. Toronto, Ontario: 1983, pp. 13.

Evaluation of a television campaign on parenting designed to foster a more positive emotional environment for children under five and to teach and remind parents of basic child-rearing skills. CAPP

19. Turner, R. Jay. Executive Summary: Risk and Prevention for Maladaptive Parenting: The Family Volunteer Study. London, Ontario: University of Western Ontario, Health Care Research Unit, 1982, pp. 29.

A summary of a study designed to identify more precisely factors which characterize mothers who are at high risk for parenting problems and to assess the feasibility and effectiveness of the "family volunteer" as an intervention strategy in the prevention of parenting problems. Results of the study, as well as the significance and limitations of these findings, are discussed. CAPP

20. Turner, R. Jay, Avison, W.R. and Noh, S. Screening for Problem Parenting: An Evaluation of a Promising Measure. London, Ontario: University of Western Ontario, Health Care Research Unit, 1984, pp. 116.

a) This paper reports on the results of efforts to cross-validate the screening instrument described in the study Risk and Prevention for Maladaptive Parenting: The Family Volunteer Study (above) through data collection from sample of new mothers. The theoretical implications of utilizing measures of social support to identify problems in parenting are described.

CAPP

b) Executive Summary also available, pp. 50.

(ii) Sexual Abuse

21. Dawson, R. The Use of Sexually Correct Dolls in Assessing Child Sexual Abuse. pp. 9. (Reprinted from Journal: Ontario Children's Aid Societies, Volume 28, February 1984.)

This paper presents guidelines for the utilization of sexually correct dolls in the assessment of child sexual abuse. Discussions about the strengths and limitations of their use as a diagnostic tool are also presented.

22. Family and Children's Services of London & Middlesex. Responding to Allegations of Sexual Abuse of Children. London, Ontario: 1985, pp. 103.

This is a descriptive study of the allegations and suspicions of child sexual abuse that came to the agency's attention during 1984. Included are some observations pertinent for London agencies and the community. From the data, a profile of perpetrators and victims is presented, as well as a comparison of results when interviewed by police and child welfare agency as opposed to child welfare alone.

CAPP

23. London and Middlesex Task Force on Sexual Abuse and Information London. Sexual Abuse of Children: A Directory of Services for London and Middlesex. London, Ontario: 1985, pp. 39.

This directory is intended to assist professionals to locate therapeutic programs and to make referrals based upon the individual needs and circumstances of the client or parent.

CAPP

24. Niagara Children's Services Committee. Physical and Sexual Child Abuse - A Comparative Study. Thorold, Ontario: 1985, pp. 93.

This research compares intra-familial, cross generational physical and sexual abuse of children. In each situation the following are considered; characteristics of offenders, characteristics of victims, nature of the activity, characteristics of the family, situational variables and cultural norms. The conclusion suggests that research addressing both forms of abuse could benefit from a cross-fertilization of ideas. It recommends that as the two forms of abuse are sufficiently similar that joint investigation is appropriate in certain situations.

CAPP

25. Schlesinger, B. (ed.) Sexual Abuse of Children in the 1980's. Toronto, Ontario: University of Toronto, 1985, pp. 201.

This book contains 10 papers dealing with varied aspects of child sexual abuse. The topical annotated bibliography (1980-85) contains 310 entries of published articles, books, booklets and reports primarily from Canada and the United States. The appendix includes a selected list of audio-visual resources, addresses of primary sources who distribute materials on the topic, and an author's index. (Available Fall, 1986.)

(iii) Lay Therapists

26. Baslaw, S. and Shaffran, R. Summary of Final Report: Ottawa-Carleton Child Abuse Demonstration Project: Families for Families. Ottawa, Ontario: 1984, pp. 45.

Summary of the final report of a demonstration project which examined the feasibility and effectiveness of using a healthy community family to provide services to members of a child abusing or high risk client family unit. The community family carried out a range of supportive, instrumental and tension-relief activities with an overall objective of preventing or reducing continued child abuse. The findings indicated that the treatment model was feasible but results were inconclusive regarding program effectiveness.

CAPP

27. Child Abuse Prevention Program. Parent Aides and Crisis Day Care Placements as Supports to Abusing and High Risk Families: Final Report (Revised). Toronto, Ontario: 1982, pp. 25.

This is a report of a demonstration project sponsored by the Children's Aid Society of Kingston and the County of Frontenac. The purpose of the project was to assess the effectiveness of parent aides in combination with crisis day care placements in meeting the needs of abusing or high risk parents. The paper describes the program and research components and discusses the reasons the data did not establish program effectiveness.

CAPP

28. Hornick J., Patterson, C. and Clarke, M. The Use of Lay Therapists in the Treatment of Child Abusers: A Final Evaluation Report. Waterloo, Ontario: Wilfred Laurier University, Faculty of Social Work, 1983, pp. 180.

CAPP

a) Full report of a two and a half year demonstration project conducted by the Family and Children's Services of the Waterloo Region and Wilfred Laurier University which examined the use of lay therapists in the treatment of child abusing parents. The report describes the program, the evaluation methodology, the results and recommendations.

b) Summary Report also available, pp. 35.

29. Hornick, J.P. A Review of Programs and Research Projects Involving Lay Therapists in the Treatment of Child Abuse and High Risk Parents. Wilfred Laurier University, Faculty of Social Work, Waterloo, Ontario: 1983, pp.70.

CAPP

An examination of the issues surrounding the use of lay therapists in the treatment of child abusing parents, through an analysis of seven Ontario lay therapy demonstration projects and other Canadian and United States research projects. Recommendations concerning future research in the use of lay therapists are presented.

(iv) Family Violence

30. Carriere, R. and Thomson, A. Family Violence, La Violence Familiale. Laurentian University, Sudbury, Ontario: 1985, pp. 109.

This is a bilingual annotated bibliography of 789 Ontario publications on family violence. Listings are organized into three categories: child abuse and neglect, spousal abuse and the abuse of the elderly. Included are descriptions of articles, books, reports and bibliographies published between 1980 and 1984. For French Translation see 88.

CAPP

(v) Native Child Abuse

31. Carriere, R., Lewko, J., Turcotte, J. and Boyd, Carol (eds). Native Child Abuse and Neglect: A Bibliography of Canadian Resources. Laurentian University, Sudbury, Ontario: 1985, pp. 40.

A resource book which documents the literature currently available on child abuse and Native populations in Canada. It includes an annotated bibliography, addressing 9 different areas ranging from "identification and reporting" to "foster and alternative care of abused children".

CAPP

(vi) Issues in Research & Project Design

32. Hornick, J.P. Child Welfare Demonstration Project Evaluation: Problems and Solutions for Program Staff and Researchers. Toronto, Ontario: 1984, pp. 41.

This monograph is directed at demonstration project directors, research evaluators, and managers of social welfare agencies involved with new demonstration projects. The report provides information about designing and implementing innovative treatment programs with an evaluation component. It highlights major causes of project failure with possible solutions.

CAPP

33. Newberger, E.H., Newberger Moore C. and Hampton, R.L. Child Abuse: The Current Theory Base and Future Research Needs. (Reprinted from the Journal of the American Academy of Child Psychiatry, 22, 3:262-268, 1983).

The nature and quality of the knowledge regarding the causes of child abuse are examined through a review of studies of the impact of abuse on children. The relationship between theory construction, study and clinical action is addressed. Recommendations with respect to the focus and content of future research are presented.

34. Sevicik, I. An Ecological Perspective of Child Neglect; Relevant Research Re-Ordered; A Service Delivery Model Examined. Toronto, Ontario: University of Toronto, Faculty of Social Work, 1984, pp. 81.

This paper argues for an ecological perspective of child neglect. This focus, which is on the interaction between the individual and the environment, necessitates an examination and re-ordering of research and service delivery. The document is primarily for those interested in an abstract/conceptual orientation rather than a practice/service orientation.

(vii) Failure to Thrive

35. Finkel, K. (ed.) Failure to Thrive Symposium, 1985. Ontario Centre for the Prevention of Child Abuse, Toronto, Ontario: 1985, pp 129.

This publication includes the four papers presented at the First Symposium of the Ontario Centre for the Prevention of Child Abuse in 1985. Each paper is written by a medical practitioner and highlights one aspect of failure to thrive. Included in the publication is a summary of the symposium discussion with particular attention to the need for broad based professional education, collaboration, different models of intervention, and current challenges in the identification of and response to failure to thrive infants.

(viii) Child Abuse Detection

36. Rutherford, B.M. Prediction Issues in Child Abuse Detection, Prevention and Treatment: A Review of the Literature. Toronto, Ontario: York University, 1982, pp. 197.

This paper is a review and evaluation of the literature pertaining to the prediction of child abuse. The report is designed to determine the usefulness and feasibility of employing such instruments in Ontario. It is of special interest to researchers, administrators responsible for policy development and implementation and is also relevant to practitioners in order to enhance their understanding of this project. C. TRAINING

37. Carriere, R. Report on the Two Day Seminar of French Films on Child Abuse. Sudbury, Ontario: 1985.

This is a report of the feedback from the 55 participants who reviewed four films in French about child abuse. A description of the organization of the seminar, audience profile, and seminar evaluation are included as well as the film evaluation. For French Translation see 89. CAPP

38. Child Abuse Prevention Program. Planning a Seminar. Toronto Ontario: pp.8

A concise guide to planning a multi-professional seminar or workshop on child abuse. A suggested bibliography is also included.

CAPP

39. Falconer, N.E. and Hornick, J.P. Attack on Burnout: The Importance of Early Training. Toronto, Ontario: Children's Aid Society of Metropolitan Toronto, 1983, pp. 20.

Report of a Pre-Work Program which provided intensive training for inexperienced child welfare workers during their first six months of employment. The project was designed to demonstrate that these workers would be better prepared than those trained by the usual methods, thereby reducing burnout and turnover and improving quality of service. Because the demonstration and research were prematurely terminated, due to economic restraints, objective data was inconclusive. On the basis of comments by trainees and other staff, the program prepared the workers better than usual. Suggestions for future research in this area are presented.

CAPP

40. Ministry of Community and Social Services. Audio-Visual Resources on Child Abuse. Toronto, Ontario: Government Printing Office, 1986.

A brochure of audio-visual material selected by the Child Abuse Prevention Program to be used for professional training and/or public education. Descriptions are both factual and evaluative. The films/video tape programs are identified as appropriate for professionals, children and youth and the general public. Resources are available from a free-loan library; directions on how to obtain the audio-visual material is included. (Available Fall, 1986).

CAPP

41. Volpe, R., Breton, M. and Mitton, J. Interfaculty Child Abuse Prevention Project: A Training Program for Professionals. Toronto, Ontario: University of Toronto, 1982, pp. 26.

This monograph reports on the design, implementation and evaluation of an inter-faculty child abuse training program for students and practitioners in nursing, teaching and social work. Results indicate that such a program can be an effective means of accomplishing its objectives and that the three groups gained from sharing experiences. Evaluation suggests certain areas of training may be realized best by specialized workshops.

IV. COMMUNITY COLLABORATION

58. Byles, J.A. and Baker, M. Final Report: Evaluation of the Community Child Abuse Team Project of the Hamilton-Wentworth Region. Hamilton, Ontario: McMaster University, Department of Psychiatry, Faculty of Health Sciences, 1981, pp. 63. CAPP

The report presents a summary of the conceptual model, an identification of the major departures from the proposal and a description of the major issues affecting implementation of the project. The report suggests that the fundamental failure of the project was the inability of the Children's Aid Societies to share responsibility for child abuse cases with other community agencies.

59. Carriere, R. and Thomson, A. Child Abuse & Neglect: A Compendium of Community Resources. Sudbury, Ontario: Laurentian University, 1984, pp. 184.

This French and English Compendium identifies the books, pamphlets, journal articles, public documents, audio-cassettes, film strips, slide-tape presentations and films on child abuse and neglect which are available in the Sudbury community. There is also a chapter giving an overview of community services. For French translation see 87. CAPP

60. Child Abuse Prevention Committee, Lennox and Addington Family and Children's Services. Child Abuse Resource Enquiry Research Project. Napanee, Ontario: 1985, pp. 70.

The study aims to determine the knowledge, attitudes and experiences of professionals in Lennox and Addington County who may become involved with child abuse. It identifies treatment services and resources available both within and outside the county in an effort to better coordinate an interdisciplinary approach to child abuse. Copies of questionnaires and data analysis are included in the appendix. CAPP

61. Children's Aid Society of the District of Parry Sound. Interagency/Child Abuse Projects. Parry Sound, Ontario: 1985, pp. 90.

The report summarizes the development of procedural guidelines or protocols for the reporting of suspected child abuse between the Children's Aid Society and 23 community services in the District of Parry Sound. The appendix lists the specific activities required to produce the protocols, and an outline of the organization and roles of a local child abuse committee. CAPP

67. North York Interagency Council. Guidelines for Counsellors Working with Sexual Abuse Cases. Youth Clinical Services. North York, Ontario: 1985, pp. 57

This document is of special interest to those working in a clinical setting with youth. It outlines the clinician's responsibilities and tasks in recognizing and reporting cases of suspected child abuse with victims up to age 16 and those older. The roles of the therapist in supporting the youth in investigation and preparation for criminal proceedings are outlined. Appendices include information about the child welfare and criminal justice systems, medical examination, criminal injuries compensation board and the child abuse register. Services described are specific to Metropolitan Toronto, but other information is relevant across the Province. CAPP

68. Peel Inter-Agency Council on Child Abuse & The Children's Aid Society of the Region of Peel. Child Sexual Abuse, Collaborative Treatment Protocol. Mississauga, Ontario: 1985, pp. 32.

This protocol was developed by and for professionals providing service in the Region of Peel. A treatment protocol is presented as well as a description of the assumptions and knowledge base underlying the protocol. CAPP

69. Pembroke General Hospital, Pembroke Civic Hospital, Family and Children's Services of Renfrew County. A Review of Documentation for the Purpose of Development and Implementation of Guidelines on Reporting Suspected Child Abuse Cases in the Pembroke and Area Hospitals. Pembroke, Ontario: 1985, pp. 147.

The summary of the review of 67 suspected child abuse cases in Pembroke and area supported the need for the use of a protocol in suspected child abuse cases. The protocol for medico-nursing personnel for use in a range of hospital contacts including suspected child abuse, is part of this publication. It also examines the expectations and perceptions the local medical professionals and social workers have of each other. CAPP

70. St. Joseph's Hospital. The Inter-Agency Child Abuse Prevention Study. Hamilton, Ontario: 1985, pp. 180.

This study was designed to determine the priorities of relevant departments and services with respect to child abuse in a general hospital and in the community. It attempts to identify the strengths and weaknesses of the hospital/agency liaison. Recommendations are made to assist in the development of a coordinated approach to dealing with both potential and verified child abuse. CAPP

V. PREVIOUSLY CATALOGUED

This final section includes resources published between 1978 and 1984. They have all appeared in a previous catalogue. There is a range of materials, some of which may be historically helpful, but not necessarily a reflection of the current "state of the art". There are a limited number of copies available.

74. Allen, Judge H.W. Judicial Inquiry into the Care of Kim Anne Popen by the Children's Aid Society of the City of Sarnia and the County of Lambton. Toronto, Ontario: Government Printing Office, 1982. Four Volumes.

A four volume report of the investigation by Judge H.W. Allen of all matters relating to the care of Kim Anne Popen by the Sarnia and Lambton County Children's Aid Society.

Volume I - A review of the life of Kim Popen. pp. 250.

Volume II - An examination of certain events in Kim's life and the involvement of various persons, institutions, authorities and organizations in those events. pp. 457.

Volume III - Continuation of the examination of the involvement of various persons, institutions, authorities and organizations in specific event. As well, recommendations made by witnesses who appeared before the inquiry are reviewed. pp. 433

Volume IV - A summary of the author's conclusions, findings, and opinions following the same sequence as the chapters of the report. A tabulation of recommendations based on the evidence is presented. pp. 683.

75. Lero, D.S. and de Rijcke-Lollis, S. Early Childhood Educators' and Private Home Day Care Providers' Knowledge, Attitudes and Experiences Related to Child Abuse. Toronto, Ontario: Government Printing Office, 1978, pp. 71.

- a) On the basis that early childhood educators are in a unique position to contribute to the identification and reporting of child abuse, as well as to primary and secondary prevention of abuse, an examination was made of their knowledge, attitudes and experiences. Findings revealed inadequate knowledge inhibiting early childhood educators from being effective in identification, referral, prevention, and treatment of child abuse. Recommendations are made for use by training institutions to enhance and support the role of early childhood professionals as participants in multidisciplinary approaches to child abuse.
